

Stakeholder Experiences: COLLABORATING WITH THE COMMUNITY

At EDP Renewables North America (EDPR NA), we take pride in building strong, honest relationships with the communities who host our wind farms and solar parks.

From the early development phases, through construction, and throughout a project's decades-long operational life, we are committed to being a good neighbor and engaging with local stakeholders. Our employees live and work in our project communities, so whether we're hosting a booth at the annual town fair or donating to the local food bank, we do our best to become part of the community.

"We've talked to some of the people who have wind turbines going on their land, and they hear the same things about the wind farm crews that we've been hearing:

How nice they are, how much work they've done up there, and that they're polite.

Even my customers have noticed."

- Kirk Dwyer, owner of Chancy's Grill & Shake
Moran, Kansas

"The wind farm guys have all made themselves a part of the community.

There has never been a one of them who has been disrespectful. Most of the wind farm people have given us their cell phone numbers. They've turned into really good friends."

- Loren & Regena Lance, owners of the Mildred Store
Mildred, Kansas

"The EDP Renewables Charitable Fund is a permanent investment in Randolph County, allowing the Community Foundation to award grant dollars to improve the lives of the residents of the County, today, tomorrow, and forever.

The fund is endowed, meaning that the foundation invests the money and uses the gains from those investments to do good things in our community year after year.

It is like EDP is making a gift that will continually give back to our community for years and decades."

- Lisa Jennings, Executive Director
Community Foundation of Randolph County, Indiana

"EDP Renewables played a huge role in creating the wind technician program. They donated $150,000 to it, which was a huge help.

Tax revenue will also be raised from the wind farm, so the county was able to pitch in another $100,000 toward the program. We're renovating part of the building to start wind technology classes for juniors and seniors in high school, which will be totally free for them.

This wind tech program is going to be great, hands-on work.
Without the wind farm, this wouldn't have happened. It's fantastic."

- Ray Maloney, owner of Ray's Metal Shop
LaHarpe, Kansas

EDPR NA'S COVID-19 RESPONSE

During the COVID-19 pandemic, EDPR NA donated $300,000 to local non-profit organizations providing relief from the health and economic impacts of COVID-19 in the more than 50 communities where we have a project in operation, construction, or development.

Here are a few of the kind words we received from community members in response:

James Finfrack & Company
Thank you for your generous donation to Prairie Central Food Service. Your support means so much to us and the community that we serve. With these donations, we are keeping the children of the community fed through these uncertain times. Please know that your generosity is greatly appreciated.
Sincerely, Joni Bisognone

You know, faith and trust are a funny thing.

Back in March when we had front row seats to all the devastating situations related to the pandemic, I had to really trust that PIK would be ok. We wanted to jump in and get helping, so we did.

Some ways we're sweet. Gift cards for essential workers that aren't getting a lot of thanks. Love mobs. Quiet random acts of kindness keeping the community spirit alive.

Some were more serious. Life's unexpected twists and turns didn't stop because we were in the middle of a pandemic. We watched business owners who help US, close their doors, and wonder what their future holds. Families still struggled with sick children, house fires, and empty bank accounts.

We wanted to keep showing up for the community we love so much. I also knew that when our fundraising in the spring was cancelled there was an uneasy feeling, but I went back to trust. I started PIK with nothing but hope in my pocket, and figured if we started without money, then if fundraising had to cease, we would figure it out. Our community has a way of showing up for us, just in the beautiful simple ways we do them.

Then my phone rang one day. A very wonderful man from EDP Renewables North America LLC called and wanted to hear more about PIK.

Next thing I know, we received a $5,000 donation.

I had to re-read the email a few times.

There were definitely some tears, and an overwhelmingly strong sense of gratitude.

I trusted. And that trust was returned.

Even though sheltering in place, and physical distancing is going to change some things, we don't have to worry about how we're to show up for our beloved CHQ.

Blake, and EDP Renewables North America LLC, thank you just doesn't feel quite appropriate. Perhaps our gratitude will be better shown in the sigh of relief in gas cards for a chemo patient, a bed set for a little girl fresh out of a shelter, or some other unexpected act of kindness bestowed upon a member of this community.

Thank you for this incredible and generous donation, but that's enough out of me for now, we've got some work to do. 🙏
