2. The anti-corruption and anti-bribery laws

2.1 Applicable Laws

Almost all countries have laws prohibiting corruption of their public officials, and many countries have laws criminalizing corruption of foreign officials. Besides, many countries have laws prohibiting commercial bribery among private parties.

As a multinational organization doing business worldwide, EDPR and Company Personnel are subject to different laws, regulations and international anti-corruption treaties, prohibiting corruption of public officials and private parties, such as:

- Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), issued in the United States;
- UK Bribery Act issued in the United Kingdom;
- United Nations Convention against Corruption.
- OECD Convention on Combating Bribery of Foreign Officials in International Business Transactions;

In general terms, the main international anti-corruption laws state the following prohibition principles:

- Bribery of public officials: a) The promise, offering or giving to a public national official, foreign public official or an official of a public international organization, directly or indirectly, an undue advantage, for the official himself or herself or another person or entity, in order that the official act or refrain from acting in the exercise of his or her official duties, in order to obtain or retain business or other undue advantage; (b) The solicitation or acceptance by a public national official, foreign public official or an official of a public international organization, directly or indirectly, an undue advantage, for the official himself or herself or another person or entity, in order that the official act or refrain from acting in the exercise of his or her official duties.
- Bribery in the private sector. Commit intentionally in the course of economic, financial or commercial activities: a) The promise, offering or giving, directly or indirectly, of an undue advantage to any person who directs or works, in any capacity, for a private sector entity, for the person himself or herself or for another person, in order that he or she, in breach of his or her duties, act or refrain from acting; b) The solicitation or acceptance, directly or indirectly, of an undue advantage by any person who directs or works, in any capacity, for a private sector entity, for the person himself or herself or for another person, in order that he or she, in breach of his or her duties, act or refrain from acting.
- Trading in influence: a) The promise, offering or giving to a public official or any other person, directly or indirectly, an undue advantage in order that the public official or the person abuse his or her real or supposed influence with a view to obtaining from an administration or public authority, an undue advantage for the original instigator of the act or for any other person; b) The solicitation or acceptance by a public official or any other person, directly or indirectly, an undue advantage for himself or herself or for another person, in order that the public official or the person abuse his or her real or supposed influence with a view to obtaining from an administration or public authority of an undue advantage.

2.2 Relationship with other policies and local laws

Anti-Corruption laws in some countries may impose specific requirements not found in this Policy. Similarly, EDPR may have established local policies in some countries that impose additional requirements.

As a general rule, if there is a difference between this Policy and local policies or regulations, the more restrictive standard applies. Notwithstanding, in case of conflict between this Policy and a local law or policy or in case of doubt about how to coordinate this Policy with any local law or policy, the General Secretary of EDPR must be consulted.

2.3 Consequences of non-compliance with this Policy and the Applicable Laws

EDPR shall use every reasonable effort in order to prevent any conduct in violation of this Policy and/or the Applicable Laws, and to interrupt and sanction any contrary conduct by Company Personnel or Transaction Partners.

Failure to comply with this Policy and with the Applicable Laws can have severe consequences for the Company, the Company Personnel with supervision duty and the Company Personnel directly involved.

The consequences can result in significant monetary penalties against the Company and can subject Company Personnel to prosecution, criminal fines, and imprisonment. Furthermore, other legal consequences may arise from such violations including debarment from contracting with public entities, confiscation/disgorgement of money made or damages claims. Even more importantly, such events cause a material adverse effect on a company's reputation.

The Company will view any violation of this Policy or of the Applicable Laws as a significant matter subject to disciplinary action including termination of employment in the case of Company Personnel, and termination of the relationship and claims for damages in the case of a Transaction Partner or an External Party.

3. Transactions involving External Parties

3.1 Scope

As mentioned, EDPR has adopted this Anti-Corruption Policy in order to establish a zero-tolerance standard to bribery and corruption.

In general terms, EPDR expressly prohibits the following behaviors:

- The Company, the Company Personnel, and the Transaction Partners shall not pay bribes and shall not, directly or indirectly, offer to give, promise to give, authorise to give, or give Anything of Value to any External Party (or to the spouse of, or to a relative, or to any other person having a close-relationship or a common interest with the External Party) or to any other person or entity when all or some portion of the thing of value would be offered to be given, promised to be given, or given to an External Party for the purpose of inducing the External Party to use his or her influence or authority to secure an improper advantage, such as obtaining or retaining business, or for the purpose of rewarding the External Party for the use of his or her influence or authority to have secured an improper advantage.
- The Company, the Company Personnel and the Transaction Partners (or the spouse of, or a relative of, or any other person having a close-relationship or a common interest with the Company, the Company Personnel or the Transaction Partners) shall not, directly or indirectly, solicit, agree to accept, or accept Anything of Value from any External Party for the purpose of inducing the Company, the Company Personnel, or the Transaction Partners to use their influence or authority to secure an improper advantage, such as obtaining or retaining business, or for the purpose of rewarding the Company, the Company Personnel or the Transaction Partners for the use of their influence or authority to have secured an improper advantage.

3.2 Key issues in providing Anything of Value to External Parties

3.2.1 Common criteria

Genuine business gifts and hospitality or other legitimate business expenditure are an established and important part of building and maintaining business relationships, but they can be used to hide bribery and corruption.

This Policy does not prohibit normal and appropriate gifts and hospitality or other legitimate business expenditure when conducting business for or on behalf of the Company provided that any expenditure involving External Parties addressed in this Policy meets all of the following criteria:

- The expenditure must be directly related to one of the following activities:
 - The promotion, demonstration, or explanation of the Company's products or services;
 - the execution or performance of a contract by the Company; or
 - any other bona fide business activity of the Company.
- The expenditure is not made with the intention of improperly or illegally:
 - Inducing to obtain or retain business or any other business advantage;
 - rewarding the provision or retention of business or of any other business advantage; or
 - exchanging (explicitly or implicitly) favours.

- The expenditure must not be related to an offering to External Parties involved in a tender or competitive bidding process where the Company is bidding.
- The expenditure must be related to an offering given openly and transparently (not in secret).
- The expenditure must be appropriate in the circumstances, taking account of the reason for the gift or hospitality, its timing and its value.
- The expenditure must not be related to an offering of cash or cash equivalent.
- The expenditure must be reasonable in amount (not lavish or excessive).
- The expenditure must be infrequent when combined with all other business courtesies offered by the Company to the same recipient (both infrequent in relation to the same individual and infrequent in relation to offerings addressed to several individuals of the same entity).
- The expenditure must be accurately recorded in the books, registers and logs of the Company as provided in this Policy.
- The expenditure is made with prior written approval as provided in this Policy.
- The expenditure must be permissible under the Applicable Laws.

Moreover, the Company is aware that practice varies between countries and regions and what may be normal and acceptable in one region may not be in another. The test to be applied is whether in all the circumstances the gift hospitality or payment is reasonable and justifiable. The intention behind it should always be considered.

If any Company Personnel or Transaction Partner is unsure about whether a particular act constitutes bribery or corruption in a specific country, it should be raised to the General Secretary of EDPB who will count with the support of the Local Legal Counsels.
